Adjectives

Adjectives can be used to describe or limit a noun or pronoun. Some articles can be adjectives.

Describe:

A descriptive adjective expresses the quality or type of the noun.

Example: A pretty girl.

The adjective, pretty, describes the noun (girl).

When using more than one adjective to describe a noun or pronoun, separate the adjectives with a comma.

Example: The big, shaggy dog ran away from the tired, frustrated, angry dog walker.

Limit:

A limited adjective points out a number or quantity. There are four classes of limiting adjectives:

1. Demonstrative: this man, that lady, these books
2. Possessive: my book, his sister, their uncle
3. Numerals: two men, many people, any book, some things
4. Articles: a, an, the are used to describe either a definite or indefinite designation

Example: The man ran away from the scene of the crime.

(the use of “the” designates one particular man)

A man ran away from the scene of the crime.

(the use of “a” or “an” for a word starting with a vowel, does not designate any particular man)

Comparison of Adjectives:

Adjectives have different forms used to express different levels of quality or quantity:

Positive Degree	Comparative Degree	Superlative Degree
cheap	cheaper	cheapest
good	better	best
bad	worse	worst

Adjectives with more than three syllables should not change – instead of using the “er” or “est” form, these adjectives should use “more” or “most.”

Example: My more memorable event was the day of the wedding.

Not memorabler event

The most beautiful sunset followed a perfect day on the beach.

Not the beautifulest sunset
