How to Research Degree
Requirements & Take Courses
for Transfer Credit

Why Do We Research?

- ✓ Not all schools offer the same majors & programs.
- ✓ The same major at different schools will likely require/ prefer different courses.
- ✓ Certain programs & courses will require prerequisite courses.
 - Ex: College Algebra > Precalculus > Calculus I
- ✓ Many programs require courses to be completed with a certain letter grade & overall GPA.
- ✓ Courses offered at different institutions are often labeled differently.
 - Ex: VC – ENGL 1301 vs. UT – RHE 306
- ✓ To take classes at VC that best align with the expectations of the transfer institution & your educational goals.
- ✓ To maximize the number of credits that transfer & are applicable to your degree requirements.

Step 1: Find Transfer Admission Requirements

- Although you may not attend your transfer institution right away, it's important to know what guidelines you must meet to be eligible in the future.
- Let's pretend I'm interested in Texas State and the University of Texas – Austin as potential transfer schools.

Admission Requirements (Spring)	Texas State	UT- Austin
General Requirements	Application & fee, official college transcripts, HS transcript (up to 15 hrs)	Application & fee, two essays, official college transcripts, HS transcript, resume
Deadlines	November 15	October 1
GPA Requirements	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• 1-15 TRANSFER CREDIT HOURS: 2.0 Cumulative GPA• 16-29 TRANSFER CREDIT HOURS: 2.5 Cumulative GPA• 30+ TRANSFER CREDIT HOURS: 2.25 Cumulative GPA	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• 24+ TRANSFER CREDIT HOURS: All hours must be required transferable coursework

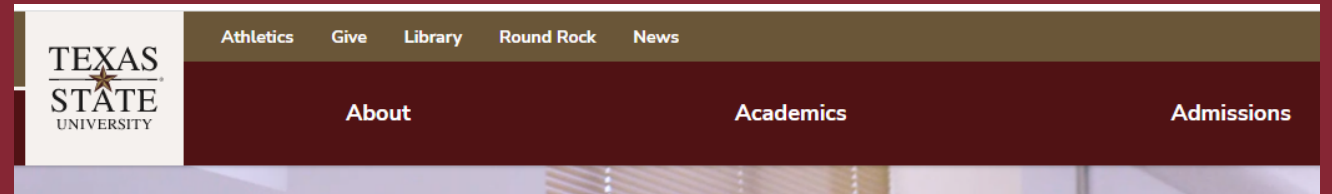

Transfer Admission Keywords

Searching is all about patience, persistence and knowing what you're looking for.
Oh, and Google is always allowed.

- Go to your transfer institution's homepage and look for any keyword, or combination of keywords, that we have listed here.

- Admissions
 - Undergraduate Admissions
 - Transfer Admissions
- Apply
- Transfer

Step 2: Find Coursework & Program Requirements (if possible)

- While at VC it's important to satisfy your VC education requirements while simultaneously working on applicable course for transfer. In simple terms, take courses at VC that you can use here and at your next institution. It takes some planning to do this successfully.

Reminder: These online resources are a guide ONLY and may be inaccurate or subject to change. Always consult with your advising team @ both schools to ensure you take the correct courses.

Step 3: Find Course Equivalencies (if possible)

- As we briefly mentioned, institutions do not always use the same labeling system for courses which can make it difficult to match courses for transfer.
- So how can we tell if VC's ENGL 1301 is the same as UT's RHE 306?
- Well we need to figure out how the transfer institution does their course equivalency.
 - For example:
 - UT – Austin uses an Automated Transfer Equivalency System
 - A&M, Sam Houston & Texas State all use their own equivalency system.
 - TAMUCC & UTSA use the Texas Common Course Number System \(TCCNS\) as do many other schools.
 - Lamar uses Transferology.
 - Some schools, like UNT, list their courses out in the catalog while others provide equivalencies in their guides & degree plans that we viewed in Step 2.

Let's Practice & Key Takeaways

- There is no correct way to approach your search for information. Google and your institution's website, and search bar, are great places to start.
- Websites can be hard to navigate but finding the information you need is both rewarding and helpful.
- Always refer to information found but remain cautious that it may not be 100% accurate and may change before you transfer.
- Always take your findings to your VC advisor for feedback and consideration when choosing addition courses.
- Always stay in communication with your next institution to ensure you are satisfying coursework and program requirements while at VC.
